The TSA is testing security features at San Francisco International Airport's newly renovated Terminal Two. The terminal opens next week. Today, dozens of black and red pieces of luggage lined the terminal waiting for a high tech inspection. Security officers need to be able to find every weapon or explosive, no matter how busy. The $400 million dollar terminal is scheduled to open next Thursday. American Airlines and Virgin America will call it home. On Saturday, the airport is offering a sneak peek inside. Tickets are required and they can go obtained by going to KTVU's website.

It happened after last night's newscast ended, but we can now tell you the results of the Richmond City Council bootee on a waterfront casino project. Pomo Indians had proposed building a casino, hotel and homes at Point Molate. But the city council decided to abandon the project...in a five to two vote. at the end of a five hour meeting. Last November... Richmond voters also rejected the casino in a purely advisory vote. Supporters argued the casino would create jobs and revenue.

The incident that grounded Southwest planes and led to the FAA calling for the inspection of 737 jets has happened before. KTVU spoke with an expert and found why this aircraft is susceptible. Engineers say the rip happened in the roof right where they expected on what's called a lap joint between the sheets of aluminum. Two decades ago the roof ripped off a stress fatigued Aloha Airlines 737...a flight attendant was sucked out of the plane to her death and 65 other people were injured. The FAA fined Southwest three years ago for failing to inspect of fuselage cracks. Despite new cracks found on some other Southwest planes, a consulting engineer says failures are rare. He expects the FAA will require more thorough and more frequent inspections on all high-cycle airliners.

A popular bar in San Francisco is about to change ownership. The Eagle Tavern is one of the city's older gay bars and the gay community is rallying to save it. The 30 year old iconic bar is scheduled to close at the end of the month. About a hundred supporters gathered on the steps of city hall this afternoon to fight the bar's closure. The concern now is that when the bar opens under new ownership, the bar won't cater to the gay community. One patron says it's his safe haven. Supporters say they are saddened because the Tavern is a popular community gathering spot and has long hosted weekly events to benefit causes such as AIDS treatment, hospice care and breast cancer prevention. Supporters are trying to enlist the help of San Francisco supervisors to put pressure on the property owner to keep the bar the way it is. We contacted the property owner and the owner of the Skylark, but neither returned our calls.

San Francisco's Muni drivers are taking a strike authorization vote this week, even though the MTA says their contract prohibits strikes. The operators say the vote is necessary in case contract talks break down. At issue are $50 million in proposed cuts and savings... that include hiring part time drivers and cutting overtime. The San Francisco MTA says a strike would be illegal and unnecessary. The head of the Muni drivers union was unavailable this afternoon, but a driver we spoke with told us he'd be willing to accept a wage freeze. Muni passengers say a strike should be avoided at all costs by both sides. 2,200 Muni operators have until Friday to vote on a strike authorization. The MTA says that if talks break down, arbitrators will step in...intend of drivers stepping away from the job.

A shocking move...Major League Baseball steps in to take over an historic franchise. The Santa Clara City Council has approved a sale of up to $35 million on bonds...some of which would help pay for a new 49ers stadium. The first $25 million would go to maintain the Santa Clara Convention Center, two fire stations, a library, and other public facilities. If that sale is successful, Santa Clara can sell an additional $10 million in bonds to go toward the proposed stadium project.

The budget ace is falling this week in San Jose city employees. Hundreds of pink slips are going out. 127 police officers are scheduled to get lay off notices. Notices are going out while many unions are still negotiating with the city. San Jose plans to cut 400 positions on top of 220 workers laid off last year...but retained through temporary finding. 230 will bump others out be seniority. Officials say some jobs could be saved if more unions follow the firefighters voluntary 10% pay cut. 20 firefighters get pink slips tomorrow...the union may have to wait until July to find out if the concessions helped. Officials say another wave of these pink slips could happen anyway, because all of the projected cuts only total about $38 million form the $115 million deficit.

The cost of your morning cup of Joe could be going up. That's because the wholesale price for coffee beans has doubled in the past year. The price of wholesale coffee beans is the highest it has been in decades, which means that could soon drip down to consumers at coffee houses, restaurants and grocery stores. Demand for higher quality roasted coffee in other parts of the world is catching up with demand here. Couple that with the weakening dollar and you could have record high prices. George Vukasin of Peerless Coffee in Oakland told us as his prices go up, that cost is passed along to his clients. Retailers say that while most customers do not notice price increases, come are willing to pay whatever it takes to get a good cup of Joe. Coffee retailers say prices could go up from 25 cents per cup to a dollar per pound.

At this hour, several dozen Native American Protestors are spending a fifth night at what they consider to be a sacred sight in Vallejo...in an effort to prevent a park from being built there. Earlier today, the protestors voiced concerns that they might be physically removed from Glen Cove on the edge of Carquinez Strait. Protestors say the land is sacred and they have no intention of leaving until the recreation district drops plans to build public bathrooms, use heavy equipment, including a grader on the land and put in a paved parking lot. Protestors say thousands of Native Americans are buried at this location. The Department of Justice has been called in to mediate the dispute.

San Francisco Police want to find out who dumped 12 tons of trash on Donner Avenue in the Bayview District. Friday night's dumping was the first time in five months someone used that street as a place to dump their trash. Most of it was roofing material, but we found everything from stuffed animals to photographs. The city tells us it will cost about $30,000 to clean up the latest mess. In February we reported on the city's campaign to put an end to illegal dumping in the Bayview. Now, residents and business owners there tell us they want the city to do more, such as install surveillance cameras.

San Jose is experiencing a graffiti surge. It can be seen on freeway overpasses and bridges, some of it has been visible for almost a year. But today, the city took action and we find out why it took so long. It took months for the city to coordinate the clean up efforts because the bridge is Caltrain property. On top of all that, the Highway Patrol and Caltrans were needed to close the freeway exit ramp to Bird Avenue. Today and tomorrow between 10am and 2pm, drivers have to use a detour so crews can scale across the bridge and paint. Complaints of graffiti have doubled in the last six months. This project alone cost $40,000 to clean up. The city says the majority of the graffiti comes from tag teams interested in gaining notoriety, while the remaining 15 to 20 percent is gang related.

The University of California says it's admitting a record-setting 72,000 students to next year's freshman class. Not all will accept the invitation and that's a good thing...because UC is hard pressed to find the money to educate them all. The UC system is facing a half-billion shortfall of state support next year, which is why tuition has gone up and more students are from out of state. UC is admitting more out of state and forgone students who pay a lot more tuition than residents and that money helps educate 11,000 Californians who the university says couldn't afford to have on campuses. At UC Berkeley, where every department and school is being told to dip into reserves, student say that there are long waits to get into classes. Absent more money form the state, the UC Regents are considering some tough solutions: maybe doubling in-staters tuition and admitting more out of staters.

While the Fukushima and Chernobyl may be considered at the same level, the two different disasters are vastly different, at least in terms of radiation released so far. Tonight's report shows us a clear example of the difference. Experts say this pile of sand is about how much nuclear material the Chernobyl accident released its' first hour. And this is how much Fukushima released during its' worst hour about three weeks ago. UC Berkeley Engineer, Jasmina Vujic says unlike Chernobyl, the area near the Japanese plant was immediately evacuated and radiation levels were never acutely hazardous. She's consulting with international officials to try to lower the rating. UC Berkeley Nuclear Physicist Kai Vetter checks for red spikes of Japan radioactive iodine and cesium...just barely detectable. He says continuing radiation testing of local milk, fruit, grass and soil all show a similar reading. Vetter says his team plans to continue sampling and pollens an international conference this summer to analyze the results.

A Napa County Grand Jury says a red light camera may have wrongly ticketed thousands of drivers. Drivers heading south on Highway 29, who take a right at 121 must stop on a red light before completing the turn. But from May through September of last year, more than 3,200 drivers were issued citations for running the red...$475 dollars to be exact. So many people have complained to the Grand Jury, that the Grand Jury investigated and found problems with the red light camera system...including that the light didn't remain yellow long enough. The city could return only $155 dollars, because the rest of the fine goes to the county and the state. The Grand Jury recommends refunds for about a thousand people. Napa Police wouldn't comment on the recommendations, but says the red light cameras have made the streets safer. The city has until June 10th to respond to the Grand Jury.

Bay Area scientists say it appears the San Andreas Fault is on the move, splintering East to join the Hayward Fault. This could eventually mean fewer bigger quakes. Called the world's most dangerous fault, the Hayward fault cuts through East Bay communities. Scientists say it's already taking up a quarter of the San Andreas strain. The reason is this kink in the San Andreas Mountains...and the fault is trying to reduce friction by straightening out and fracturing toward the North. That would chip San Francisco and the Peninsula off the North American Plate. Scientists say the Bay Area's hazard remains significant. Simpler may mean more smaller quakes and fewer really big ones, however, these changes in fault structure take many thousands of years.

San Francisco's Animal Welfare Commission is considering a first of it's kind law in California that aims to prevent "repeat" animal abusers from adopting pets. Sandra Bernal works for San Francisco's Animal Care and Control and starting pushing for a pet owner registry after seeing the effects unfit owners have on one animal after another. She sees owners that have a cycle of adoption and abandonment. There are also cases of neglect and cases of animal hoarders. The owner of these rats kept as many as 300 rats in one small room until his neighbors started complaining. The problem with hoarders is that they tend to adopt new pets as soon as animal control takes them away. These animals are the reason Bernal is pushing for a statewide registry. Before a statewide law can be passed, San Francisco would have to pass its' own law.

A Democratic congressman is visiting a bay Area church to talk about immigration and the power of the Latino vote. As KTVU reports, is an increasingly influential voting block. This afternoon, Congressman Luis Gutierrez started his seven city California tour in the Bay Area. At St. Peter's Episcopal Church in Redwood City, he demanded the Obama administration stop deporting immigrants. Also at the church, a group handed out fliers encouraging the children of immigrants to register to vote. A Pew study released today found more Latinos than ever voted in the 2010 midterm election, 6.6 million up from the 5.6 million in 2006. Researchers attribute the growth to young Latinos now eligible to vote. The director for San Jose State's Survey and Policy Institute says the Republican stance on immigration still has Latinos strongly leaning Democratic, which is why the Santa Clara County Republican Party says outreach on the other party issues is a key matter.

These days it's pretty easy to spot a foreclosed home; the grass isn't cut, there are weeds everywhere and the home just doesn't look like it's being kept up. The City of Oakland is fighting blight and telling whoever owns the home to clean up their property or else. The City of Oakland is looking at 1200 vacant foreclosed homes to determine if they are considered blight. If the city thinks the home is blighted, they give the property owner 30 days to clean it up. If that doesn't happen, a $1,000 dollar a day fine goes into effect for everyday it goes unkept. But if the property owner refuses to pay, they will put a lien on the property so that when it is sold, Oakland will get its money in the transfer.

It's been nearly 50 years since the Equal Pay Act was passed, but women are still making about $.77 to the male dollar. In its efforts to eliminate the discriminatory factors in this issue of equal wages for men and women, the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission is offering outreach events to raise awareness. Linda Ordonio-Dixon is a Senior Trial Attorney with the EEOC and discusses ways you can help in the cause.

Looking for new kinds of dining experience? Dining in the Dark is back for its 4th year in San Francisco, bringing to you a multi-sensual meal. Guests will eat in complete darkness while being served by visually impaired servers. The fundraising event is meant to raise awareness for people with visual disabilities and eye diseases. Jamie Lehrer-Stein of the Foundation Fighting Blindness shares her story of dealing with blindness and invites you to attend the dinner. Receiving the Foundation's Visionary Award will be former Mayor of San Francisco, Willie Brown, who was diagnosed with retinitis pigments.

May is National Foster Care Month, and it's a great opportunity for people from all walks of life to get involved locally to improve the lives of children and teenagers in foster care. There are about 424,000 children in America that are living in foster care and 66,009 in California. Vicky Quinto and Esther Spearman from Casey Family Programs talk to us about the ways that all interested parents, including single parents and same sex couples, can bring a foster child into their family.

The second annual Maddie's Matchmaker Adopt-a-Thon is coming up and hundreds of cats and dogs are eagerly awaiting to be adopted to loving homes. Meet King, a 10 year old Chow/Labrador mix who, until months ago, was a stray. All adoptions are free to the public and in return, Maddie's Fund will pay each shelter or rescue group $500 for each animal adopted, $1,000 for every animal over the age of 7 and $1,500 for any animal in need of medical attention. This is a great opportunity to find a loving addition to your family, while helping a great cause.
